Iron Computer Corporation

3825 Braker Lane

Austin, TX 78759 US

Supervisor:

Principal Responsibilities:

(Member Of The University Of Texas Technology Incubator)

(A Manufacturer Of PCs For Hostile Environments)

The software creation technology, which resulted from the Freez-Dry Research and Development Project (see below), was exclusively licensed to FreezFree Corporation in early 1993. FreezFree immediately entered into a software development joint venture with Red Line Burgers, Inc. for the purpose of creating a state-of-the-art MIS system for Red Line using the Freez-Dry software creation technology.

As part of the software development project, certain computer hardware products designed to function in environments hostile to off-the-shelf PC's were developed. When Red Line encountered financial difficulties in mid-1994 and cancelled the project, Iron Computer Corporation (originally named DieHard Computer Corporation) was founded to finance, manufacture and market the computer hardware products. Consequently, shortly after its founding Iron acquired the hardware products from the joint venture. In 1997, Iron also acquired the rights to all of the software, which had been developed including the software creation technology...Freez-Dry.

After a successful product launch at COMDEX Fall '94, the company became embroiled in a trademark dispute with Sears Roebuck over the use of the name "DieHard". Once the dispute was settled in early 1995, the company resumed operations. Due to a deteriorating financial condition brought on by the previous legal dispute, manufacturing and marketing operations were suspended again and a debt reorganization plan was implemented in the summer of 1995.

Subsequently, the company significantly enhanced its product line of PC's designed for hostile environments, recruited a management team consisting of veterans of the PC industry, received its first patent on its products and began marketing its computer products.

After canceling an Internet-based initial public offering of its common stock in the fall of 1997, the company retained a well-respected New York underwriter to provide interim funding and to complete an initial public offering of its stock.

Selected accomplishments included:

- Instrumental In The Engineering And Design And Patenting Of A completely sealed PC suitable for use in hostile environments
- Successfully Implemented A Reorganization Of The Company's Debt
- Recruited A Management Team Consisting Of Computer Industry Veterans
- Conceived And Implemented The First Federally Registered (Form SB-2) Internet-Based Initial Public Offering
- Implemented A Successful Product Launch At COMDEX Fall '94

Shortly after retaining the New York underwriter, the United States Attorney in New York arrested the chief executive officer of the underwriter for alleged drug money laundering. The underwriting firm was subsequently closed, and the initial public offering failed. Because of the timing and circumstances of the proposed funding, the company was unable to raise the required capital and ceased operations.

The Freez-Dry Project

3822 Northland Drive

Austin, TX 78731 US

Supervisor:

Principal Responsibilities:

Austin, Texas; Houston, Texas

Pomona, California; Paris, France

(A Multi-National Software Development Company)

Founded this computer software research and development project in October 1987. The project's goal was to develop a more efficient and cost-effective method of creating computer software. The paradigm that eventually proved to be the most elegant and efficacious for the problem solution was the science of genetics and genetic engineering.

The first prototype system based upon the principles of genetics and convergent actualization was successfully demonstrated to work in Paris, France in August 1989. After an additional two years of engineering testing and evaluations, a software patent application was filed in the United States in May 1991 covering the resultant technology. After the development of a marketing strategy in late 1992, which was incompatible with a patented technology, the patent application was withdrawn and the technology became a protected trade secret.

During the life of the project, over forty persons contributed resources toward the successful completion of the project. In early 1993, the technology was exclusively licensed to FreezFree Corporation and subsequently Iron Computer Corporation (see above).
